Each day the conferees streamed through the door with great anticipation. The typical morning begins with a quiz on what was taught the day before, followed by the lecture. In the afternoon, the conferees break into small groups to discuss Biblical solutions to real issues and problems they face in Mongolia. Each group will then present its case for the benefit of everyone to learn. On the last day was the examination. Each conferee has to arrange in canonical order the 27 books of the New Testament and recite the key word for each book from memory. I am greatly encouraged by their great enthusiasm and eagerness to study God's Word.

The Mongolians not only opened their door to welcome the Word of God. They also opened their hearts to us. They received us with warm friendship, food and gifts that were beyond their means.

We might have taught them the New Testament, but they showed us how to live it.

Conferees are required to discuss in small groups and present Biblical solutions to local issues/problems
